

John Tuller is an independent consultant with more than 20 years of marketing, public relations and event planning experience. He is the founder and owner of JTuller Associates, Inc. a public relations and corporate development consultant firm.

John plays a critical role in the 21st Century's most innovative, fastest-growing and dynamic industries. A former senior executive with two of the Country's largest media and entertainment companies, Gannett Inc. and Time Warner, he advised the leadership of each of these organizations on public policy, public and community relations, marketing strategy, employee relations and diversity initiatives.

As a former executive in the world's largest media, entertainment and information industries, John helped to connect these companies to their communities and to the world. He helped to deliver the benefits of the Information Age to the world's most diverse, most lucrative and most demanding markets. John was a leader in these organizations when technology breakthroughs, fierce competition and custom demand for top-quality information, entertainment and customer service were shaping the future of the Nation.

Born and raised in New York City, John serves on many institutions promoting community and economic development; he champions the cause of some of the most civic and cultural organizations. John presently serves on various committees and boards, but finds quality time to spend with his wife and two sons.